About Sevastopol

Sevastopol, is the largest city in Crimea and a major port on the Black Sea. Due to its strategic location and the navigability of the city's harbours, Sevastopol has been an important port and naval base throughout its history. Since the city's founding in 1783 it has been a major base for Russia's Black Sea Fleet. During the Cold War of the 20th century, it was a closed city. The total administrative area is 864 square kilometres (334 sq mi) and includes a significant amount of rural land. The urban population, largely concentrated around Sevastopol Bay, is 479,394, and the total population is 547,820.

Sevastopol has a humid subtropical climate. Due to the summer mean straddling 22 °C it borders on a four-season oceanic climate, with cold winters and warm summers. The average yearly temperature is 15–16 °C during the day and around 9 °C at night. In the coldest months, January and February, the average temperature is 5–6 °C during the day and around 1 °C at night.
